Prepare for the Unexpected

A home survival kit can provide more than peace of mind – it can help you care for your family when an emergency strikes. Every home should have a disaster survival kit. Include enough provisions for one to two weeks' supply for each person in your home. Hurricanes are not the only events that may require a disaster kit. Fires, thunderstorms, floods and tornadoes all have the potential to disrupt daily activities, transportation and supply availability. Have your kit complete and readily available NOW.

Home Kit Contents

- Personal hygiene supplies
- All-hazard weather radio
- Juices and soft drinks
- Camp stove and fuel
- Road maps
- First aid kit
- Plastic trash bags
- Manual can opener
- Utensils, plates, bowls, cups, pots, pans, etc.
- Car tank at least half full of gas
- Personal medications and prescriptions
- Basic tools for clean-up and repairs
- Special items for babies and elderly
- Sanitary supplies, towels, wet wipes
- Canned or other non-perishable food
- Traditional (not cordless) telephone set
- Cash with some small bills and credit cards
- Battery-operated television or radio and flashlight with 3 extra sets of batteries each
- Drinking water – one gallon per person per day
- Important documents in water proof container or watertight resealable plastic bag
- Cell phone with extra battery and car charger
- Wet and cold weather clothing
- Blankets, pillows, sleeping bags, lawn chairs
- Paper goods (toilet paper, paper towels, etc.)

These items are suggested but are not necessarily all inclusive of everything your family needs to prepare for a hurricane or other severe storm situation.
